

Carl Joseph

2 mins ago

Hey Cancer, I'm on the ice and you're out of the game.

Cancer. Where you're treated first can make all the difference.

When CJ was diagnosed with rhabdomyosarcoma at age 5, he was already an avid hockey player. The treatment for his cancer, in most hospitals, would have been to amputate his leg. Fortunately, CJ was treated at Memorial Sloan-Kettering where a team of specialists was able to remove the cancer and save his leg. Today, CJ plays forward on his college hockey team.

Read CJ's story at MSKCC.org/CJ.

Memorial Sloan-Kettering
Cancer Center

MSKCC.org